

Jacob Stump

Jacob is an Associate Teaching Professor of Philosophy at Northeastern University in Boston, MA. He was trained in ancient Greek and Roman philosophy, but his recent focus has been on the philosophy of emotions. He is also working on a public-facing book that challenges Stoicism's conception of mental health and provides a mindfulness-based alternative.